

Constitution Day Commemorating Lecture

---

Let alone securing social, economic and political justice to all Indians, guaranteeing them equality of status and opportunities before law and protecting their freedoms of speech, expression, belief, faith, vocation, association and action, the Constitution of India is so all pervasive that it also comes to the rescue of Architects and Planners. The acquisition of land for public purpose or conservation of heritage precincts represent only a few instances that have long been addressed by the Constitution of India, years before separate legislations were enacted for each purpose.

---

Constitution of India: Rationale and Relevance

Friday, December 03, 2021, at 3 P.M.

Prof. (Dr.) Raka Arya

Prof. (Dr.) Raka Arya is Professor at the prestigious National Law Institute University (NLIU), Bhopal. She specialises in Administrative and Constitutional Law, Air and Space Law, Women and Human Rights. A PhD from Jawaharlal Nehru University (JNU), country's premier academy, Prof. Raka holds several academic and administrative positions at NLIU. She has been on board of JNU court, Transparency International, High Powered Committee on Legal Empowerment of Women, M.P., and many other committees of both union and state government. She is a distinguished member of American Political Science Association, Indian Political Science Association, India Academic Council of United Nations (ACUNS), and many more. She regularly contributes scholastic papers to national and international journals of repute.

