Heritage still has a place in our lives and culture. Today built heritage is looked more as a product of culture, where its interpretations have become an integral part to conservation of the structures. Hence emphasis is laid more on values and significance of this heritage and accordingly they become the heritage of universal, national, regional and local importance. With technological advancements, the society is drastically changing. Hence it is extremely critical to understand the meaning heritage has in present society as they are subjected to potential threats like rapid urban growth, industrial and intensive agricultural activities, growing land prices, encroachments and organisational apathy.

This conference therefore critically aims to create environments for international cooperation for identification, study and solution of legal, administrative and financial issues in connection with the protection, maintenance and conservation of built heritage
